TAUP Contract Talks Continue as Time Grows Short

TAUP and Temple administration met again yesterday in a sidebar conversation discussing primarily academic issues. So far the University has not reponded in writing to most of TAUP's proposals, even though the current contract expires on October 15. Click here to find out more about Temple's responses.

TAUP is concerned that time is growing short, and stands ready to engage in meaningful negotiations as often as necessary to complete a new contract.

We need your help to let the Temple Board of Trustees know that the faculty, librarians and academic professionals of our bargaining unit are behind the negotiating team. Please take 30 minutes of your time to add your voice to our call for a new contract.
